The Principles of Animation

The course begins by exploring the fundamental principles of animation, which serve as the building blocks for creating realistic and dynamic characters. These principles include:

- Squash and Stretch: Exaggerating the deformation of characters during movement to add weight and fluidity.
- Anticipation: Preparing the audience for an upcoming action by hinting at it in advance.
- Follow-Through: Allowing objects and characters to continue moving after the main action has stopped.
- Secondary Action: Adding subtle movements to support and enhance the main action.
- Overlapping Action: Creating a sense of depth and realism by animating different parts of the body at different speeds.
- Arcs: Moving characters along curved paths rather than straight lines to mimic the natural motion of the human body.
- Timing: Controlling the speed and duration of movements to convey the character's emotions and intentions.
- Exaggeration: Amplifying movements and expressions to enhance the character's personality and create a visual impact.

Goldberg emphasizes the importance of understanding and applying these principles to create characters that are not only visually appealing but also believable and relatable.

Traditional vs. Digital Animation

The course delves into the differences between traditional and digital animation, each with its unique advantages and challenges. Goldberg demonstrates the fundamentals of hand-drawn animation, including sketching, inking, and coloring, while also exploring the possibilities offered by digital tools.

Participants learn about the benefits of traditional animation, such as its organic and tactile nature, as well as the advantages of digital animation, including its versatility, efficiency, and ability to create complex effects.

Goldberg emphasizes the importance of researching and understanding the characters' backgrounds, motivations, and relationships to create characters that resonate with the audience.
