In the vast and ever-expanding Warhammer 40,000 universe, few events hold as much significance and grandeur as the Siege of Terra. A pivotal battle that shaped the destiny of mankind and the Imperium of Man, the Siege of Terra was a desperate struggle against the traitorous primarch Magnus the Red and his Thousand Sons legion.

The Gathering Storm

The seeds of the Siege of Terra were sown centuries prior, during the Horus Heresy. Magnus, once a loyal son of the Emperor of Mankind, turned to the dark powers of Chaos in his quest for knowledge. His actions led to the burning of his home planet of Prospero and his exile from the Imperium.

Driven by vengeance and a desire to reclaim his lost glory, Magnus rallied his corrupted Thousand Sons legion. Together, they formed an unholy alliance with the daemonic hordes of Nurgle and the ambitious traitor legions of Horus Lupercal.

The Invasion of Terra

In 014.M31, Magnus's armada arrived in the Sol System, setting its sights on the Imperial Palace on Terra. The planet was the heart of the Imperium, and its fall would spell doom for mankind. The defenders of Terra, led by the loyalist Space Marines of the Ultramarines, Imperial Fists, and White Scars legions, prepared for a desperate defense.

The ensuing battle was a cataclysmic clash of titanic proportions. Magnus unleashed his sorcerous powers, summoning warp storms and unleashing daemonic hordes upon the defenders. The loyalists, bolstered by the presence of the Emperor himself, fought back with unwavering determination.
