The story is set in the Bronx, a borough of New York City that has long been associated with crime and violence. Weber's novel captures the borough's gritty realism, and he paints a vivid picture of the daily life of its residents. The novel's characters are a mix of criminals, cops, and civilians, and they all have their own unique motivations and desires.

The novel's plot revolves around the five most powerful crime families in the Bronx: the Luccheses, the Gambinos, the Genoveses, the Colombos, and the Bonannos. These families have been vying for control of the borough for decades, and their rivalry has led to countless acts of violence and bloodshed.

Weber's novel follows the lives of several members of these families, including Sonny Grosso, a rising star in the Lucchese family; Salvator Bonanno, the heir to the Bonanno family; and Detective Mike Reardon, a cop who is determined to bring down the mob. These characters are all complex and well-developed, and they each have their own strengths and weaknesses.

Weber's writing is sharp and engaging, and he keeps the reader on the edge of their seat from beginning to end. The novel is full of action, suspense, and intrigue, and it provides a fascinating glimpse into the world of organized crime.
