The most striking feature of the house is its unconventional geometry. The structure is composed of a series of interlocking cubes and rectangular volumes, stacked and oriented in seemingly random fashion. This fragmented form creates a sense of playful asymmetry that defies easy categorization. The exterior is clad in a monochromatic palette of white stucco and glass, giving it an ethereal and otherworldly presence.

serene reflecting pool and lush greenery, providing a serene retreat from the urban chaos outside.

The living spaces are characterized by their minimalist aesthetic, with white walls, high ceilings, and expansive windows. The absence of ornamentation and clutter allows the architectural features to take center stage. The house features a spacious living room, a formal dining room, a library, and several bedrooms, all of which flow seamlessly into one another.

Elevated Seclusion: A Hilltop Haven

Perhaps the most captivating aspect of "One House Over the Neighbors" is its secluded location. Perched atop a gently sloping hill, the house enjoys panoramic views of the surrounding neighborhood. From its lofty vantage point, the occupants can survey the daily hustle and bustle from a distance, creating a sense of detachment and privacy.

The house is surrounded by sprawling lawns and mature trees, which further enhance its secluded ambiance. The exterior spaces include a swimming pool, a meditation garden, and several outdoor seating areas, allowing the occupants to fully embrace the beauty of the natural surroundings.
